PAISED IRISH
IN HIS LECTURE
PATRICK J. HALTIGAN SPOKE ON INTERESTING SUBJECT.

MYERS OPERA HOUSE FILLED Well-Known Editor of National Hibernian Assails President Elliot of Harvard University.

Arounding his hearers to a high pitch of patriotic enthusiasm, Patrick J.
Haltigan, editor of the National Hibernian, of Washington, D. C., addressed a large and attentive audience in the Myers opera house last evening on the subject of "The Irish in the American Revolution and Their Early Influence in the Colonies." The lecture was given under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Mr.
Haltigan declared that the subject of the Revolution was an old one but he hoped to present facts that would add to the knowledge of his audience and show the endeavor of the Irish people to keep down the noble deeds done by the Irish. He was introduced by James Burns, who declared that seventy-five per cent of the audience had Irish blood in their veins and by the time of the close of the lecture the remainder would wish they had. Cattle blood. In part Mr. Haltigan said:
"The story of our part in the making of the American republic never has been made properly known. There exists an organized plan not to mention the Irish or their deeds of valor in the struggles of this great nation.
There is a well-laid scheme to exclude the Irish in every possible way from the credit due them in this country's history."
"We have borne with oppression for ages. The Irish flag has had enough hoisted upon it for generations on this as well as the other side of the ocean. During the civil war England followed up its practices of oppression and its deadly opposition to our institutions. They have sought to distort American history as far as possible, and especially to ignore the Irish element that contributed so much to its making."
"All discrimination against the Irish and the Catholics can be traced to one source. All of it is a direct interposition from old enemies across the sea. That same power now is turning our school books into English readers. The Americans, either consciously or unconsciously, are being made the instruments in this evil work."
"Didn't know American History."
"President Elliot of Harvard a few years ago contributed an article to a popular and widely circulated magazine on the five influences that operated into the making of the American people. He omitted any and all mention of the Irish."
"A man by the name of O'Donnell lives in Washington, who was in the bureau of treasury statistics, protested to President Elliot against the unfairness of that magazine article. The only defense the president of Harvard could make was that he had no knowledge of the extent to which the Irish had contributed to the greatness of the nation and its people, and that he must have had indomitable courage to omit it."
"The head of one of our greatest universities said he didn't know what the Irish had done. He didn't necessarily have to know Irish history to be in possession of this information. If he had known American history he must have seen the names of the Irishmen who made themselves famous by their deeds of valor and heroism in the revolutionary as well as in later wars."
"The Springfield Republic took him severely to task for his omission in that magazine article. I am of the opinion that there was some other motive—not mere lack of knowledge—in President Elliot's omission. If, as he says, he did not know what the Irish had done, then I say he is grossly and densely ignorant upon a subject of which he should be well informed before attempting to write magazine articles."
Reference to Bishop Berkeley "Things like this meet no response in the hearts of the great American people."
"The Irish have held steadfastly to their religion. One of the prominent Irish clergy who did much for this country in its early days was Bishop Berkeley. Harvard college today is drawing revenue from a piece of land Bishop Berkeley gave. Yet, when we look up the college records to find out who Bishop Berkeley was, we find him briefly referred to as 'an outcast English divine.'"
At the close of the lecture Mr.
Haltigan and several members of the local Hibernian society enjoyed an oyster supper at Schmidley's restaurant.

THE MAURETANIA ONE
OF THE OCEAN QUEENS

The great Cunard steamship, "Maure-tania," which arrived in New York Friday, though at first slight identical with the "Lusitania," exceeds that vessel slightly in size, so that the palm of being the greatest vessel which the world has ever seen, is transferred to the "Mauretania." She also differs from her sister ship in the matter of interior decoration.
Probably no vessel has ever had so stowed upon this branch of its structure so much thought or such a striking after a tasteful result as has been the case with the "Mauretania." The immense size of the "Maure-tania" can best be appreciated by the following dimensions: Length, 730 ft.; breadth, 88 ft.; depth to boat deck, 30 ft.; draught (fully loaded), 27 ft. 6 in.; displacement on load draught, 45,000 tons; horsepower of turbine engines, 70,000; height to tops of funnels, 155 ft.; height to mainmasts, 210 ft.; passenger accommodation, 1st class, 550, 2d class, 500, 3d class, 1,500; crew, 800 to 900.
Figures, however, convey but a bare idea of the great ship. A favorable standard of comparison in shipping is the location of travel, the "Great Eastern," the mammoth steamer, which, born before its time, yet solved in her construction many of the most difficult problems with which the modern builders of big ships have to grapple. "The Mauretania," however, quite dwarfs the gigantic "Great Eastern," as the following figures show:
"Great Eastern," "Mauretania." Length, 692 ft., 730 ft.
Breadth, 80 ft., 88 ft.
Displacement, 27,000 tons, 45,000 tons Passenger accommodation, 1,500, 2,500 Paddle screws, 4, 2 Speed, 13 to 14 knots, 27 1/2 knots.
In the matter of lighting and ventilation, probably no vessel has ever equaled the "Mauretania," there being no fewer than 1,200 windows and skylights, including 500 patent ventilating lights. Artificial illumination is furnished by 5,000 electric lights.
The dining saloon and upper saloon are in oak in the French 18th style, beautifully carved, in the main entrance hall and staircase the design is Italian Renaissance, carried out in French walnut, and the same style in the same wood, with the addition of satinwood inlay, is used with the effect in the smoking room. The library is done in sycamore, of a beautiful green shade, and is furnished in Louis XVI. style, and the same style is carried out in the lounge and music room in mahogany, with large tasteful panels flanked by duplicate pillars of carved marble. The staterooms and royal suites of rooms are variously treated in Adams, Georgian, and Sheraton styles.
Equal taste has been bestowed on the second-class accommodation, in which the dining saloon is in oak and the Georgian period, the drawing room in mahogany, in a modified Louis XVI. style, the smoking room in mahogany, and the lounge and entrance hall in polished teak. A new feature in the second-class accommodation is a large deck shelter, which must add greatly to the comfort of the passengers in cold or stormy weather.
In their degree the third-class passenger have also been liberally dealt with, both in their dining saloon and for recreation, the latter being exceptionally large and airy, whilst the former is nicely finished in polished mahogany, with a Lincoln and J. P.
Schlossbach, Cochrane, Wis., water-ash.
The "Mauretania" is indeed a vessel of wonderful contrasts. While 2,500 lei, Milwaukee, Wis., back peeling im-passengers will sit down to dinner in the brilliantly-lit saloons, fifty cockles; T. Thorsen, Menomonee, Wis., will labor heroically in her great lift-haul-propelling mechanism, 85 ft. above, 600 tons of dead weight laboring engine.

for locomotives; W. Lamber, Milwaukee, Wis., rotary engine; G. W. Lon-gely, Pittsburg, Kan., car door; E.
former is nicely finished in polished
mahogany, with a Lincoln and J. P.
ash.

MRS. CODDEN-SANDERSON AND DAUGHTER American is entertaining one of England's famous women suffragettes, one of those defenders of woman's rights who has made London and the British Isles all straight up and take notice of the weaker sex. She is Mrs. Cod-den-Sanderson by name. She believes woman should vote and she belongs to that band of English women who have fought their way to the very walls of parliament and made the venerable lords shiver in their well-padded seats.
But, said to relate, Mrs. Sanderson says American women are not ready for the ballot. Just as she told the English peers what she had on her mind is revolving at the rate of 150 revolutions a minute in the depths of her power chambers, in which a quickly moving staff of 350 engineers watch pressure gauges, oil whirling shafts, and feed coal into 132 glowing furnaces.
The captain, high up on his bridge, looks down 100 feet to the level of the swirling waters. A telephone is at his side through which he may speak his orders to the officers and women stationed far away on the forecastle, crow's nest, or aftermost bridge. Below decks an army of 350 stewards will wait upon the comfort of the passengers. Indeed, every detail in this vast floating town is carefully studied. The millionaire who pays $750 for a royal suite is provided with his own special attendants, his own private pantry, and a separate entrance to his apartments, so that he may live secluded as in a private mansion on land. In the barber's shop, so perfect in every detail, one finds a patent hydraulic chair which, adapting itself instantly to the figure of the ship, permits the safe shampooing of a passenger even in an Atlantic gale.
The children have not been forgotten either. A bright playroom is provided for them with a multitude of toys and parking-chairs galore. If you take a brisk walk three times around the "Mauretania's" wide promenade deck you have covered a mile exactly.
When stepping into a splendid hall, an abundance of passenger lift is waiting to convey you swiftly to the stateroom below, each of which is fitted with a separate telephone apparatus. Thus if you desire it you may ring up the central exchange and be conveyed immediately with the stateroom of any other passenger in any part of the ship. The more pressing of an electric bell in one's cabin operates an elaborate apparatus in the steward's room, by which the attendants on duty see at once, even among the multitude of apartments, which passenger is desiring attendance.
The ship is provided with a lounge and library. In style these two rooms are influenced by a revived appreciation of the Louis Seize period. The lounge is finished in mahogany, white, and gold. The wood work of the library is of sycamore stained to a silver grey. The furnishings are in keeping with the style represented, and are of unusual richness.
For safety her double-bottom is divided by the vertical keel and transverse frames into compartments, in which water ballast may be carried.
In fact the "Mauretania" is not only double-bottomed, she is double-sided, the double bottom being carried well

MILLER CELEBRATED

His Release from the State's Prison to the Lock-up.

Joseph Miller, who was sent to Waupun for entering the Lawrence home on West bluff street and badly frightening two young women under whose bed he found a hiding place, completed his term in state's prison yesterday and arrived in Janesville on the noon train. Not long after his return to this city, the man was intoxicated and making trouble at the Hennison & Lane bakery. Officers Champion and Fanning escorted him to the lock-up where he made the declaration that he would hang himself before he would go back to the state's institution at Waupun. The prisoner had not been taken to court at noon today, and it seemed to be the intention of the police to allow him to sober up and then give him a chance to get out of the city.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

"Of what earthly use is a soldier who drops his musket and takes to his heels at the first onslaught of the enemy? Where would a nation and with an army of such soldiers? Where a business?"

"At present this country stands face to face with a most absurd enemy, who can be like a bolt from a clear sky and wholly without cause."

"That enemy is Fear."

"Are you a good fighter or are you a coward? Are you going to lay down arms before this imaginary fictitious apparition, or are you going to 'march breast forward' and help break down this fear in the minds of your customers?"

"There is no reason why merchants or anyone else should be alarmed. The backbone and foundation of this nation is its integrity and natural resources, which are in most superb condition. In fact, the land flows with milk and honey. The only trouble is the people (some of them) are scared stiff."

"And about what? Absolutely nothing. It's just like a cry of fire in an open house where no fire exists."

"Fear is no person, place, nor thing. It has no actual cause—no real power. In the presence of confidence it becomes absolute nothingness and vanishes as darkness before the light."

"When a snag is blown out of a river or by dynamite the noise creates excitement, but the snag being removed leaves the river clear. Several snags are being removed from the 'financial river' but the explosions should cause no alarm. With the snags removed this country's prosperity will flow on greater and more powerful than ever."

"Which side are you fighting on—fear or confidence? Every word you speak, every thought you think, has power for good or evil. Think it over and be an optimist."

"This sensible little sermon was written by Ernest Keith Holloway, and appeared in last Sunday's Tribune. It sparkles with hard common sense and merits more than passing thought."

"Fear is a demon of darkness. It assumes ghastly forms, bringing terror to childhood, and wretchedness to mature life. The boy of ten, poisons his mind with stories of crime, and in the loneliness of his quiet chamber imagines that the house is invaded, and covers his head to shut out the sight of the burglar who is liable to emerge from under the bed, at any moment."

"The man of fifty, worn out with care and worry, and on the verge of nervous prostration, tosses in wakefulness and imagines that he is a victim of every disease to which the human flesh is heir. When the boy and man awake from troubled sleep in the bright light of a new day's sunshine, fear vanishes."

"There are some households where the scepter of fear holds full sway, and the children live in an atmosphere of dread and apprehension. Obedience is enforced by the law of fear rather than encouraged by the law of love, and the result is that children go out into life from such environments only half developed, and their whole being is an apology for being in existence at all."

"Grover," a bright lad of a dozen years, but a founding, was consigned to a state institution, where, for the want of a better term, he was pronounced incorrigible. The daily routine of the institution included a dog-ling for the boy, which he anticipated with meekness regularly.

In the course of time he was transferred to another state school where discipline was less rigid and, where the law of kindness was exhausted, before other measures were adopted.

When spoken to by a teacher, Grover's arm involuntarily went up to his head as if to protect his face, and the habit was so fixed that it was noticeable.

Asked why he did it, he said, "I have been accustomed to the blow before the command, and I always like to be ready for it."

There are some homes where the same policy is pursued—homes where the Bible is a sealed book, except for that one brief scrap of suggestive advice, which says, "Spare the rod and spoil the child."

There was a time when many good people believed that the most effective way to get people into the kingdom of grace and glory, was to drive them in with the bludgeon of fear.

God, the Creator, was vividly portrayed as the avenger, who went about with drawn sword to decapitate willful children, and consign them to a cauldron where the fires were never extinguished, and where the fumes of darkness gloated over his victims as he stoked them into the furnace.

This sort of a gospel was popular, for a time. It required no thought and but little preparation. A good pair of lungs and vivid imagination furnished the necessary equipment, and fear, stimulated by ignorance and superstition, did the rest.

But in the bright light of a better civilization, the discovery is made that all men are brothers, and children of one common Father, and that while some of them may be willful and wicked, that the same fatherly solicitude is over them, and would wish them to obedience by love, the love which casts out fear.

The people of our nation are just now demoralized by the phantom of fear—not the irresponsible people, who never owned a dollar nor paid a poll tax, but the people who represent the bone and sinew of the nation.

The average people who own property pay taxes, and contribute to the support and welfare of the country. They have houses which are insured and farms that are tacked down, with an abundance of stock and personal property.

They also have in their pockets, or tucked away in some place for safekeeping, an insignificant amount of money—as compared to the wealth which they possess—and this little whiff of money is causing them more trouble, just now, than anything else.

A senseless fear possesses them concerning the banks, which were never so strong as today, and so the money, which the business of the country needs, is retired from circulation. It is a little amusing to note that these same people are as courageous as giants when it comes to gold-brick investments. The banker, whom they have known for a generation, is no longer entitled to confidence, but the smooth promoter, without reference, representing some wildcat scheme, comes along and captures them without effort.

There is consistency in all things, but the present hoarding of money through fear, at a time like this, is inexcusable, and the sooner the people come to their senses and restore it to circulation, the sooner will prosperity return. Don't be afraid to trust the man and the institution which you have known so long, and which have never yet betrayed your confidence.

Forebodings of "Fingy": Beloit News: "Fingy" Connors of Buffalo, chairman of the democratic committee of New York state, declared that Bryan would do because "he's too radical" and that Roosevelt is sure to be nominated by the republicans, and that the latter is sure to be beaten, as the country is tired of radicals. (Continued.)

It is with justifiable pride that the friends of Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond read the press notices of her recitals. One of Janesville's daughters, receiving her only school education, when a child, in a private school in this city, for a limited time, by hard work and untiring energy, she has attained an enviable prominence in the world of poetry and music. At the death of her devoted husband, with little physical strength, her piano and books her sole capital, her mother-love for her son her inspiration, she accepted a concert engagement, her dress ornaments being arranged from a collection of her own. "Today, her naturalness, her artistic simplicity, her heart and home pictures, with her admiration in clubs and homes and public audiences. She recites her own stories, sings her own songs, composes her own music, and in the little "Bond Shop" in Chicago, "one of the most novel places in America," she publishes her own productions. Living her own motto—"a smile is a lot better than a frown and goes far in the right direction"—she carries sunshine into her audience. At Chautauqua Lake men, women and children sat spellbound, tears and laughter alternating with her song interpretations. In New York studies her poems are used as studies by the best pupils. In Philadelphia, Los Angeles and other large cities she has won unlimited praise. "While in London, Mrs. Bond met many great artists and was honored by many receptions. On a program with the noted tenor, Caruso, the great attraction, Caruso associated her from the stage shouting "Bravo! Bravo!" David Bispham, the eminent baritone, was deeply interested in her compositions, and uses them in his own programs. In her unique heart-touches she recalls with James Whitcomb Riley and Robert Burns. President and Mrs. Roosevelt have received her music by a letter from the White House for recitals. William H. Sherwood of Chicago says: "No one has written more beautiful melodies or sung herself more completely into the hearts of American music-lovers than Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond." No wonder that from over the water comes the message: "There's work in the world for such as you. Many thousands are awaiting your message." Janesville may be proud as the city of the birth of Carrie Jacobs-Bond, and bid her Godspeed in her mission of helpfulness and good cheer.

As the holiday season approaches Janesville society people are settling down to preparation of the festive occasion. Thanksgiving comes next Thursday and many home gatherings are planned. Janesville people will entertain on that day and many go to neighboring cities for the annual turkey dinner. Thus far no parties have been arranged for this old New England holiday and the day will be passed quietly as befits the occasion, that of Thanksgiving.

However, Christmas is but a short ways off and in many households mysterious packages are already in hiding and busy fingers fashioning dainty doll dresses or some article for table or toilet decoration. Several informal sewing circles have been formed among the younger ladies and busy afternoons closing with a cup of tea and a bit of cake are enjoyed.

The Christmas rush has not begun at the stores as yet but merchants expect to show many dainty presents for the coming gala days. Several parties have been planned for the holiday week closing with the Golf Club party on New Year's night. Other festivities not yet scheduled will go to make up a week of pleasure for which society appears to be resting itself.

During the past week Mrs. David Holmes took a party of ladies in Milwaukee by automobile returning the next day by train owing to the condition of the roads. Aside from Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Edward Peterson, Mrs. Herbert Ford and Miss Harriet Hoxford enjoyed the trip which took them through Waukesha and the lake region.

Pedestrianism still has its attractions for both the young ladies and the business men. Miss Katherine Piffard has been added to the five young ladies who enjoyed a walk to Milton last week and today the club walked around the lake from in preparation for a trip next week to Beloit. The gentlemen's Open Window Band of Hope organization has also added George Thomas to their list of members and continue their daily tramping.

On Monday last the Twentieth Century History class held its regular meeting in the Caledonian rooms. In the evening the Apollo Club gave a delightful concert at Library Hall.

Wednesday Mrs. P. J. Mount, Miss Mount, Miss Marjorie Mount and Miss Charlotte Mount gave the last of a series of three five o'clock teas, six handed euchre being the game of the evening.

On Thursday Mrs. Macgregor entertained at a one o'clock luncheon to forty ladies and in the afternoon Mrs. John Hoxford entertained two tables at bridge.

On Friday Mrs. J. L. Wilcox entertained a card club at a hard time evening, the costumes being appropriate for the theme. Miss Palmer also entertained at bridge in the afternoon.

Twenty little playmates were guests of Stewart Mills, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Mills, yesterday, at a party given in honor of his thirteenth birthday anniversary.

There was a good attendance at Prof. Kell's fortnightly dancing school.

social at Central hall last evening and the festivities lasted until twelve o'clock.

This afternoon Mrs. Judd entertains the Ladies' Afternoon Whist club.

Mrs. Stanley Smith, Mrs. Doty and Mrs. Yoncos are in Chicago.

Mrs. John P. Sweeney is visiting in Chicago.

Mrs. E. W. Lowell has received a letter from her daughter, Mrs. Sudo Hilliard, describing a trip into Manchuria, she had recently taken and children and on the 27th of home and expect to arrive in this country by December 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McKay, the Misses Marjorie Jackman, Elizabeth McKay, and Emma Richardson and Donna McKiney went to Madison this morning to attend the Wisconsin-Minnesota football game which was played at Camp Randall this afternoon.

Miss Harriet Hoxford departed yesterday for Burlington, Wis., where she will visit with Miss Leonora Melnhardt. The latter recently returned from a lengthy sojourn in Europe.

MARRIED IN ROCKFORD AFTER MANY DELAYS

Miss Myrtle Goldthorpe of Sumner and August Wenter of Alton Found True Happiness Beyond Janesville.

After many delays and disappointments, Miss Myrtle Goldthorpe of Sumner, Jefferson county, and August Wenter of Alton, Dane county, were wedded at Rockford Thursday evening. They drove all the way to Janesville, a distance of about eighteen miles, and after finding that no special permit could be secured here, boarded an interurban car for the Forest City. The power gave out and they were an hour late in reaching the Illinois city. Upon their arrival there, they were directed to the home of Justice Manlove but the latter was not at home. They called an hour later and found him at home but they had no license. This was secured at the home of County Clerk Norton and they were finally married. They caught a late car for the return journey and after reaching Janesville took an eighteen-mile honeymoon drive to their permanent home near Edgerton. The groom is a farmer and is 23 years of age. The bride is 19.

up the side of the ship. This is only one precaution in the direction of securing unsinkability. The lower deck is completely watertight. Below it are the orlop and lower orlop decks, and above are the main, saloon, upper, promenade, and boat decks. It is necessary, of course, that there should be means of communication between one watertight compartment and those contiguous, and on the "Mauretania" the doors at, or below the water line, are of a special type, and can be closed automatically from the navigating bridge, and thus in a few seconds, in all the "Mauretania" will have 175 watertight compartments, so that it may be claimed for her that she is unsinkable as a ship can be.

The "Mauretania" too, complies with the Admiralty requirements as an armed cruiser, and will be fitted for an armament of twelve 6-inch guns. These guns represent her offensive powers. With the view of protection, her rudder and both sets of steering-gears are below the water line, and in the way of the engine and boiler-rooms there are side bunkers which, filled with coal, will be equivalent to an armor belt round the vulnerable portion of the ship.

New York Commercial: Our Amer-

WOMEN SILENCE GLADSTONE.

Home Secretary "Beaten" by "Suffragettes" and Free Fight Ensues.

The interruptions from the "suffragettes" became so persistent that Mr. Gladstone declared he would no longer struggle against such tactics and brought his speech to a sudden close.

One of the suffragettes, thereupon tried to take possession of the meeting. While she was speaking a free fight broke out between the men and women of the audience. Mr. Gladstone and his wife beat a speedy retreat, and the chairman declared the meeting closed.

What Does Your Mirror Say?

Does it cheerfully report an abundance of beautiful, well kept hair or does it regretfully tell the story of hair neglect?

Your mirror may be anxious to please, but if you permit your friends to see dull, brittle and lusterless hair, with possibly dandruff and falling hair, your mirror will have to reflect the same condition.

All of these unfortunate effects can be overcome by destroying their cause with

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Remedy that "Kills the Dandruff Germ"

Dandruff, with its consequent hair injury and hair loss, is now known to be a highly contagious germ disease. It is caused by an invisible growth of vegetable character that finds lodgment in the sebaceous glands of the scalp. This growth disturbs the functions of the sebaceous glands, causing excessive oiliness or extreme dryness of the hair. It also sets up an inflammatory process that extends down the follicle to the papilla, where the adhesions are loosened and the hair slips out. The value of Newbro's Herpicide in such cases is quite extraordinary. Its intelligent use will correct every condition short of chronic baldness and thus permit the hair to resume its natural luster and abundance.

MISS EDNA IRVINE

A noted Theatrical Star whose photograph is here reproduced WRITES AS FOLLOWS: "I can most heartily endorse Newbro's Herpicide. It is delightful for the hair and I could not do without it."

(Hotel Westminster, Irving Place, New York) (Signed) EDNA IRVINE

An Owen Sound Lady Recommends Newbro's Herpicide Very Highly.

"I have found Herpicide very beneficial in removing dandruff with which I have been troubled for years. Besides being a source of annoyance it is very injurious to the hair. I can with pleasure recommend your Herpicide treatment. I have known others who used it and with satisfactory results."

PRESS COMMENT.

Watch as Public Benefactor Chicago Examiner: No doubt Mr. Walsh's desire to get all that money out of the bank and into his private enterprises was inspired solely by a nervous fear that somebody would accuse him of hoarding it and thus helping to bring on a financial stringency.

Excuse Our Blushes Madison Democrat: Certainly the Yabara should have a generous slice of that $50,000,000 destined from Congress for the improvement of the rivers of the nation. Communication with Janesville by water is all that is now needed to consummate the greatness of the capital city.

Limericks Exchange: There was only one real master of the limerick—the late Edward Lear—and he had his full five lines on which to exercise his seemingly perfect ingenuity. He could produce little whimsical surprises which at first reading, at least, produced an irrepressible laugh, even from quite grave persons.

The inquiry seemed to her irrelevant to the point of madness.

"What has that to do with it?"

"To do with what?"

"With anything. I mean what do you want to know for?"

"To be able to identify you as the daughter of your father. Please tell me."

"Yes, I have."

"May I see them?"

She turned her head and he saw the small dark spots on her white neck.

"Thank you. If you had the least idea what those two spots may mean to you, little girl—now, if I don't go away at once I shall be tempted to tell you the whole thing. It will be an infinitely better story, I confidently believe, if I keep it until my return."

He clasped her hand, which rested cold in his own. Then he left her for a few hours' sleep before his departure in the early morning.

CHAPTER XIX.

M. and Mrs. MORNING-STAR held counsel together and came to some tentative conclusions.

"If that there Doc didn't have something up his sleeve to down us with he wouldn't have the dare to speak up to us so positively," Mr. Morningstar gloomily reasoned. "To be sure, I wouldn't give in to him and make over all that there money to the girl. If I didn't have afraid he'd squeeze me for more'n that yet—let's what he sawed he'd do."

"Abraham Morningstar, you ain't going to up and throw $3,000 at that girl?" his wife exclaimed incredulously.

"Will you leave me know, then, how I'm getting out of it?" he demanded.

They were together in the kitchen just after Elmore's departure on his week's absence. Mr. Morningstar was still too ill from his cold to leave the house, and his wife was in the net of putting a mustard plaster on him when he opened up the discussion of what lay so heavily on their hearts.

"He must have took a shine to En-nie," Mrs. Morningstar lamented, "to be takin' up fur her like what he's do-in. I don't know what's got into the men, such durnt notions as they all show. There's Ollie—she's twice as fat and has never close and near twice the schoolin' as what Ennie's got. The girl's just that tricky she makes eyes at the men behind our backs, pop, that's what!"

"I've been thinkin' it out how we could split him back," Mr. Morningstar said, lowering his voice and indicating with a twist of his thumb the departed boarder. "If we do have to give Ennie them $3,000 we kin keep it in the family and get ahead of that darned towny by marryin' her to Abe right away. Ain't? You see, what that city sharper's after is to get them $3,000 for himself. It ain't often a girl bringin' four deer with them. C. E.

Doellittle and E. H. Davis also got one each.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Krueger of Milwaukee spent a part of the week with the lady's parents, Dr. and Mrs. A.
Sutherland.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give one of their fine chicken dinners on Dec. 7th.

Oliver Levenson of New Salem was visiting with friends Monday and Tuesday in and about Broadhead.

After a visit of some weeks here of poor health, has returned to Chicago feeling much improved.

the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Cas-tater.

COMMERCIAL CONGRESS ENDS.

Votes Against Parcels Post and Favors Postal Savings Banks.

Muskogee, Okla., Nov. 23.—The eighteenth annual meeting of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress adjourned Friday afternoon to meet in San Francisco next November.

A resolution endorsing the parcels post was voted down amid great applause.

Resolutions were passed favoring the establishment of a postal savings bank system by the national government; for an increase in interstate tariff rates, not to become effective until chance of protest could be made; for an appropriation by the government for better roads, for the appropriation by the government of not less than $500,000,000 for the improvement of rivers and harbors, and for the establishment of a bureau for the improvement of rivers and harbors.

Mrs. Little Leaver of Hollett is the guest of Broadhead relatives.

The C. M. & St. P. Ry. company are putting in cement walks from the depot to Dodge & Stephenson's corner; also to the Young House and on

Evans of Vernon, South Dakota, are here to remain several weeks.

Broadhead deer-hunters are doing well this season in northern part of the state. W. E. and A. H. Fleck, Will Kibbe and Carl Mayson have returned bringing four deer with them. C. E.

each.

was visiting with friends Monday and Tuesday in and about Broadhead.

"With a tower—his that much to bring to her mother. Abe couldn't get no girl round here with that much. If we do have to give her the money we couldn't do better by Abe than to leave him marry her."

"Well, mornin'," Mrs. Morningstar answered, considering the matter as she buttoned her husband's shirt over the plaster. "But it would be the me to have to marry our Abe to a girl we bring up on charity."

"That ain't neither here nor there," Mr. Morningstar sneered irritably at this sentiment. "What we want is to settle these here finances without no more loss than we can't help."

"There's this to say," Mrs. Morningstar added—"If she marries Abe maybe that underhand Hon Muehlebein will be comin' back to our Ollie when he sees he can't have Ennie."

"Yes, we'd be with him too," Mr.
Morningstar fairly sneaked his lips with satisfaction. "The hand of Providence would be in it, and it would all work out for his honor and glory. Yes, I tell you the Lord sees a many a thing head of himself that way."

"You're spittin' every one but the one I'd like to spite," snapped Mrs. Morningstar, "and that's that devilish girl, with her sneakin' ways and her playin' her tricks behind a body's back after all we done fur her already!"

"Seems we haven't dared to talk about that no more—what we done fur her, seems she done everything fur us," Mr. Morningstar suddenly added.

"Now, look a-here, mornin'; we'll fix it up between Abe and Ennie before the Doc gets back. See? I'll go ahead and tell Abe he has the dare to pass his promise to Ennie, and you kin tell her she dare have Abe now without workin' no more tricks to get him."

It was a bitter thing to Mrs. Morningstar, this talk allotted to her, but it was to become more bitter still before she was through with it.

It appeared for a moment that it was going to be made easy, Abe, entirely unconscious of what was brewing, came to his mother that very evening after his day's work was over with a passionate protest against her opposition to his marryin' Ennie and a plea that she "leave" him have the girl.

"To be sure, Ennie she knows you're agin' it, so she pertains, she don't want me. You go tell her you're in fur it, you gettin' promised together —and certainly then she'll be only too glad to git me."

"This was Abe's point of view."

"Glad to git you! Well, I guess mornin'," Mrs. Morningstar retorted.

"It's a wonder you wouldn't look higher, Abe Mornin'gstar."

"I have wonderful tired, mornin', head of this 'lookin' higher.' I got my ago—I'm a man—and it's my own affairs. If I look high or low for my wife, Ennie she suits me all right.
Even if she won't have no answerer and ain't got nothin' comin' to her, she's anyhow not one to spend at the closet or to run, and she's so handy at the work I'd never have to hire fur her. So if I am lookin' low, I ain't doin' no bad, takin' it all in all. If you and pop would only stop kickin' I'd soon git her to pass her promise. And I tell you right here, mornin', I'm goin' to marry her, anyhow—whether you like it or whether you don't. So you might as well stop your 'kickin'." To be sure it would make no loss work persuadin' Ennie. If you would stop kickin'. She's awful stubborn headed about it."

Mrs. Morningstar snuffed contemptuously.

"Och, but men is durnt things. Her stubborn headed about takin' you!— when she's been makin' eyes at you and tryin' to git you ever since you was in long pants a'ready and she was in long frocks!"

"I ain't took notice she was tryin' to git me," Abe answered sulkily. "I can't never git her to be even sociable with me. And before she'd go buggy ridin' or to a circus with me! Certainly that was because she had afraid of you."

"Well, Abe, see'n' this here's the way you feel and you bel'n' my own son that way, I'll put to aside my regrets and leave her have you. I'll tell her tomorrow."

Abe was astonished at his easy success with his mother. He had anticipated a complete routing.

"Will you make it all right with pop?" he eagerly and gratefully inquired.

With subtle diplomacy she answered that she would.

It was not until the next evening that she brought herself to broach the subject with Ennie.

When the evening chores were finished and the girl was about to take her lamp to go up to bed, she stopped her and made her sit down with her in the kitchen.

"I got to speak somethin' to you," she began in a tone of sudden reluctance, her whole person bristling with the an-tagonism she felt against her enforced consent.

"Me and pop's been talkin' it over, and we consoled we'd tell you that you'd worked pretty good and steady fur us and now that you're gettin' our age and ain't got no more claim on us we wouldn't like to see you throv'd out on the world neither, seein' how we bring you up like our own.
So you just consented that rather let you unperturbed on the world we'd keep on bein' parents to you, though, to be sure, we thought to look higher fur our Abe, him bel'n' our only son."

Ennie, sitting opposite her, at the kitchen table, was looking at her rather vaguely. But at this reference to Abe her eyes lost their absent gaze, and she met her foster mother's eyes with a fixity which the latter found almost theoperting.

She made no reply, but waited in silence for Mrs. Morningstar's ramblings to come to a focus.

"To be sure, our Abe could do a lot better. But then, see'n' you've got him so's he thinks he wants you, why, us we're not puttin' no hindrance in your way. You kin have him."

She looked for some joy or gratitude from Ennie, but the girl continued to regard her fixedly and without replying.

"We mean it," she said testily.

"You're not the dare to marry him, see'n' you want him so bad. To be sure, I guess it's hard fur you to take it in that we're leavin' you have your way!"

Still the girl had nothing to say.

"Well," cried Mrs. Morningstar impatiently. "What are you got to say for yourself? Can't you even speak sensibly (thank you) to a body?"

"I wonder what you expect me to say"—the girl's soft voice at last answered the woman's rough tones—"to thank you for offerin' me your son?"

"That's little enough to expect anyhow," Mrs. Morningstar retorted.

Ennie rose slowly and stood resting her hand on the table. "And you anything else to say to me?"

"You needn't go right away. Set yourself," she commanded. "There's some things we'd better talk out now we're at it."

"What things?" Ennie asked hesitantly, not sitting down.

"Och, I'd like to know how soon you can stand up to say 'Yes' (get married), and when you'll want to be buyin' your answerer, and when you want to go to housekeepin'—things like them."

To be continued.

Nerve Sick

If weak, worn-out,
nervous, cannot sleep;
have indigestion, headache, neuralgia or periodic pains, it is because your nerves are weak. It is the lack of nerve force that makes the stomach, heart, lungs, etc., work imperfectly—become sick.
Dr. Miles' Nerve cures the sick when it restores nerve strength, and puts the power behind the organs to do their work.

"Almost three years I suffered from nervousness, indigestion, and pain-tion of the heart. I could not get out sleep without suffering. Altogether I was in a bad condition. My doctor did not seem to do me any good. I had tried so many remedies that I did not have much hope of any of them doing me any good. Dr. Miles' Nerve cures was suggested by a friend. I got relief from the first, and after a few days I felt like a new person. It not only relieved my heart and nerves, but has invigorated my whole system. I am very grateful because since I have stopped using it, I have had absolutely no return of my old troubles."
